COMPONENT SUPPLIER VALUE PROPOSITION

NASH is the only Australian industry association supporting the cold formed light gauge steel industry in the low rise residential and commercial building markets.

This focused effort has led to the development and publication of three engineering and building standards that are referenced in the National Construction Code – the only industry association ever to do this.

NASH has a strong technical network of practising engineers, fabrication businesses, component suppliers and academic researchers.

NASH reputation and technical strength is growing and we would like more component suppliers to be part of this growth.

By choosing to be a member of NASH, suppliers of components such as fasteners and accessories used in steel framed construction can expect to:

- Receive regular updates on industry issues and developments via NASH News, the NASH website and social media.
- Network with other members at local chapter meetings, national workshops and promotional events.
- Benefit from promotion of the industry leading to more business opportunities.
- Be listed on NASH website, with linking to your own site.
- Receive referrals via NASH from business and public enquirers
- Receive expert technical support from NASH and/or referral to other expert sources of information on matters such as design, testing and material performance.
- Have input into NASH Standards, relevant Australian Standards and other publications.
- Receive discounts on NASH publications including Standards and Handbooks.
- Use the NASH logo in your business to further enhance your business credentials to the wider market.

Naturally our work is only achievable through the fees subscribed by members and sponsors, and the enthusiastic participation and contributions of our members.

NASH hopes you will consider joining us and looks forward to your involvement.
